This map of federally recognized Indian lands in Maine was created using data from the Maine Office of GIS and Manny Gimond. The map highlights the land holdings of the State's three federally recognized tribes: Maliseet, Passamaquoddy, and Penobscot. In addition, it highlights statewide public conservation lands and areas within the reservations that are not owned by the tribes. The hillshade background provides perspective to the topography of the Indian lands. Two detail insets show a drawing of social services like schools, fire stations, and police stations located in and near Passamaquoddy and Penobscot reservations. The data were processed using ESRI ArcGIS 9.2.
