Application for Approval of a Course for Women’s, Gender, and Sexuality Studies credit

Name: _________________________________ Class of: ________________
Email Address: __________________________

WGSS courses
Women’s, Gender, and Sexuality Studies courses focus on the way cultures construct concepts of gender and introduce students to important class, race, ethnic, and sexual orientation differences within and across cultures. Program courses address these intersecting systems of social difference in a range of disciplinary and interdisciplinary contexts. WGSS courses also challenge traditional scholarship and generate new definitions of culture; they illuminate women’s daily lives and social history, their language, culture, literature, psychology, and biology.

To apply for non-affiliated courses to count for WGSS major/minor credit, please fill out the application below. Additionally, please attach a copy of the course syllabus.

Title of Course:

Department/instructor:

Course Semester and Year:

How does this course address the central concerns of the WGSS major/minor described above? We are open to courses with topical, methodological, and/or critical relevance but you must be specific in your petition:
If you adapting a course to increase the WGSS-related content, please provide a detailed account of the relevant assignments and materials as well as a clear explanation of how the course has been adapted, and your particular work on these assignments.